- E.W. Hull was a hardware distributor/retailer who sold guns and gun parts under his own name during the late 1700s and early 1800s.

Model

- the model is not marked on the firearm; this is a descriptor of the firearm type.
- features include: browned finish; fixed open sights; iron mountings; an under barrel ram-rod; flintlock mechanism with cock and frizzen on the right-side lock plate; and maple straight-grip stock with an iron butt plate.
- these firearms may also be seen converted to percussion ignition.

Action

- muzzle loaded flintlock single-shot.

Barrel

- barrel lengths may vary.

Calibre

- calibres may vary.

70913 - 1	7.62X54R RUSSIAN	N/A	715	Prohibited CC 84(1) "prohibited firearm" para. (c)	Manufacturer Specifications and Commercial Customization

Notes

Make

- this machinegun is a uniquely Hungarian firearm; no other country in the world produces/produced this variation.

Model

- this is a domestically-produced Hungarian version of the Goryunov/SG-43 series of machineguns, built as a GPMG somewhat resembling the Russian PK/PKM series
- these machineguns were built in several variations, and, depending on their primary intended role, may be seen with either bipod or tripod mounts (the tripod mount also allows the machinegun to be used in an anti-aircraft role)
- these machineguns have PK-style fluted barrels and muzzle brakes, RPK-style solid buttstocks and pistol-grips, and Goryunov/SG-43-style receivers, with bolts that tip into the right sideplate to lock; they can also be identified by their SG-43-style lozenge-shape ejection ports, located on the left side.
- these machineguns are belt-fed, gas-operated firearms that fire in the full-automatic mode ONLY; a cross-bolt selector over the trigger group either blocks trigger operation, or allows full-automatic fire (this selector is marked "T" for "Automatic" and "Z" for "Safe")
- fluted barrel with quick-change mechanism (barrel handle and locating stud are located on top of the barrel), cast and machined components, three-position gas regulator below gas take-off , and solid buttstock with pistol-grip.

Manufacturer

- may be seen marked with "02".

Action

- open-bolt full-automatic ONLY

Serial Number

- serial numbered on major component parts, including bolt, receiver, top cover, and trigger group; serial number includes a "BM" prefix.

Shots

- this is a belt-fed firearm, commonly using 100, 200, or 250-round metallic linked belts.

Notes

Make

- the make may be marked on the firearm.

Model

- manufactured prior to 1865.
- model designation is not marked on the firearm.
- model was also known as a "Self-Cocking" revolver.
- the Bentley revolver may have the following features: no top strap; a large butt cap made of solid nickel; a slot in the hammer for use as a rear sight; a thumb screw on the front of the receiver/frame which when removed will allow the cylinder to be removed from the axis pin; a loading lever on the left side of the barrel; a shield in front of the hammer over the nipple. This shield prevents sparks from the nipple from harming a person.
- these firearms may incorporate any or all five of Joseph Bentley's design ideas which were covered in patent number 960, applied for on December 4, 1852.

1 - a safety catch which is applied to the hammer. This safety catch prevents the hammer from contacting the nipples when the firearm is being reloaded. This catch is visible on top of the spur-less hammer.
2 - a self-cocking action. The firearm is fired by squeezing the trigger (double action only). The trigger will have the appearance of forming half of a circle.
3 - the lock work on the firearm, which locks the cylinder once the nipple is in line with the barrel
4 and 5 - A method of manufacturing the grip plates.

Manufacturer

- Joseph Bentley is usually marked on the firearm.

Notes

Make

- make may not be marked on the firearm.

Model

- this is a commercial variant of the standard U.S. military M1 Carbine.
- approximately 200 receiver/frames produced.
- model designation may be marked on the top of the receiver/frame in front of the ejection opening usually in the format of "CAL.30 M1" or "CAL.30 M-1". It is usually necessary to determine the correct model through other features and markings.
- standard features may include: round barrel; fixed front sight; flip-up L-shaped or knob adjustable rear sights; steel receiver/frame; push button or swivel lever safety on the right front of the trigger guard; push button magazine release in front of the safety; fixed wooden pistol grip stock or metal and wood folding stock with separate upper handguard; left side mounted front sling swivel; inlet oil holder/ sing attachment at the buttstock; front barrel band which may include a bayonet lug; may feature a cone shaped flash hider, a muzzle brake or a grenade launcher attached to the barrel; parkerized finish.
- overall length with a 457mm (18") barrel is 903.73mm (35.58") and average weight is 2.49kgs (5.5lbs).

Manufacturer

- manufacturer marks are usually found at the rear of the receiver/frame or on the front side of the receiver/frame, some may be concealed beneath the stock.

Action

- gas operated.

Firearms Reference Table, National Specialized Services, Royal Canadian Mounted Police. All rights reserved, RCMP, 1998-2026.

Serial Number	- serial number is usually found on the top rear of the receiver/frame or on the side of the receiver/frame at the chamber area. - the serial number may be obscured by the rear sight or the stock. - serial numbers can sometimes be used to indicate a manufacturer or distinct model.
Calibre	- calibre may be marked on the receiver/frame.
Shots	- detachable box magazine.
Remarks	-Manufacturer names, codes or serial numbers are the surest method of identifying these firearms. Identifying marks are to be taken from the receiver/frame only. Wartime production facilities used many parts manufactured by other carbine producers as well as numerous sub-contractors. Carbines were often "arsenal refurbished", again making use of components for any number of different sources. Post war manufacturers also used many surplus military parts particularly in the early productions. As these parts ran out they began to use their own modern manufactured components. It is therefore possible to encounter a commercial carbine that will have military markings on some components as well as military manufactured firearms repaired or refurbished with modern commercial components. Further commercial identification can be done with features such as finish or stock style and material. The proliferation of modern accessory stocks, fitting, sights and other accessories may also confuse the issue of specific model identification.

Notes

Make

- the make may not be marked on the firearm.

Model

- the model designation may not be marked on the firearm.
- this is a standard-pattern second-generation submachine gun designed by Mr. George Hyde during the immediate pre-World War 2 period.
- features include; walnut buttstock, rear and fore pistol-grips; tubular receiver/frame; finned barrel; blued finish; fixed firing-pin; open adjustable sights; and a cocking handle/plunger that protrudes from the rear of the receiver/frame (this cocking handle being one of the main points against this design; as the submachine gun fires, this handle oscillates back and forth towards the firer's face and eye.)
- although the Model 35 was tested by both the US and UK, it was never adopted; one of Mr. Hyde's later designs was almost adopted as the US M2 (the "Hyde-Inland").

Manufacturer

- the manufacturer may not be marked on the firearm.

Action

- blowback operated.

Serial Number

- numbered on the receiver/frame.

- "HYDRA-MATIC DIVISION" was a division of General Motors (GM).

Model

- "GUN 20MM AUTOMATIC M39A3" is marked on the top of the receiver/frame.
- "M39A3" is a single barrel, belt-fed, five-chamber cylinder revolving cannon used in jet fighter aircraft.
- these cannons were developed to try to increase hit probability against aircraft through the use of proximity-fuzed ammunition during the Korean War, as F-86 Sabres using 50-calibre machine guns had found that they would often be out of ammunition before they had inflicted enough damage on a target to disable it. These cannons were seen on aircraft from the end of the Korean War through the Vietnam War, including F-86s, F-100s, F-101, and F-5s.
- "M39" series gun was developed by the United States based on the World War II era design of the German Mauser MG 213 cannon.
- "M39" by various manufacturers, produced over 35,500 copies.
- "M39A3" was adopted in the United States Air Force in 1967.
- features include: tapered, quick change barrel retained by interrupted threads; fires from the six-o'clock position; cannon assembly is contained in a steel welded cradle unit which incorporates aircraft mounting points at the front barrel entry position and cradle rear; fluted, five-chamber rotating cylinder; feeder assembly for a link belt attachment that can be set-up to the left or right.
- overall length with a 1359mm (53.5") barrel is 1854mm (73"), average weight is 81.19 kg (179 lbs).
- cyclic rate of up to 1700 rpm.

Manufacturer

- "HYDRA-MATIC DIVISION" is marked on the top of the receiver/frame.
- "HYDRA-MATIC DIVISION" was a division of General Motors (GM).
- "HYDRA-MATIC DIVISION" was founded in 1939 as "Detroit Transmission Division".
- "Detroit Transmission Division" when moved to Ypsilanti, Michigan U.S.A. it was renamed "HYDRA-MATIC DIVISION" in 1962.
- "HYDRA-MATIC DIVISION" stand for General Motors original Hydra-Matic transmission, the first commercial success auto-shifter.
- "HYDRA-MATIC DIVISION" would later be combined with GM Engine Division to form GM Powertrain.

Type

- single barrel, five-chamber cylinder, revolver gun.

Notes

Make	- "ISRAEL MILITARY INDUSTRIES" is marked on the left side of the receiver/frame. - "MADE IN ISRAEL" is marked on the left side of the receiver/frame.
Model	- this is a generic model; other "Desert Eagle" model entries exist which may better describe the firearm. - firearm marked "Desert Eagle Pistol" only, there is no specific reference to any designation as Mark I, Mark VII or Mark XIX. - the characteristics of this firearm are that it is a very large, very heavy, gas operated, single action, semi automatic pistol. - there are currently at least three distinct versions of the Desert Eagle pistol: the Mark I, the Mark VII, and the Mark XIX, which share the same general appearance. - the early IMI Desert Eagles used different receiver/frames sizes for the .357 Mag, .41/.44 Mag, and .50 AE calibre pistols. - the Mark XIX uses ONLY the largest (50 AE calibre) receiver/frame. - barrels, magazines, and bolt-heads for different calibres can be quickly interchanged. - features include: available in steel, aluminum, and stainless-steel, with a wide variety of finishes, including matte blue/"parkerized", bright polished blue, matte and bright nickel, matte and bright chrome, matte or bright gold, or any combination of these finishes. - these pistols come factory standard with 152mm barrels, but additional barrels in other lengths are available. - these pistols were designed to have interchangeable barrels and bolt assemblies: barrels, magazines, and bolt-heads have their calibre designations stamped on them.(Except for the Mark I pistol and any calibre conversion units designed for use with the Mark I.)
Manufacturer	- "ISRAEL MILITARY INDUSTRIES" is marked on the left side of the receiver/frame. - "MADE IN ISRAEL" is marked on the left side of the receiver/frame.
Action	- gas operated.
Serial Number	- serial number is marked on the right side of the receiver/frame, above the grip panel.
Calibre	- calibre designation is marked on the left side of the slide.
Shots	- detachable box magazine.
Other Markings	- Saco-built pistols are marked "MADE IN USA", while IMI-built pistols are marked "MADE IN ISRAEL".
Remarks	- the Desert Eagle Mark XIX is the third production version of this pistol, the primary difference between this version and other versions of the Desert Eagle is that the Mark XIX is built on a single frame size. - the Mark XIX has a unique serial number prefix "MR" and also has a ONE-PIECE barrel. Earlier Desert Eagles (Mark VII & Mark I) had a two-piece barrel with a visible line where the two pieces join.

Notes

Make

- make marked on firearm as "INGRAM PATENTS PENDING".
- the "Ingram" series of submachine guns are named for their principal designer, Gordon Ingram; his designs are of the 2nd and 3rd generation types, with manufacture and operation kept as simple as possible.

Model

- model may or may not be marked on the upper receiver/frame, depending on when and for whom the particular firearm was made.
- this is one of Gordon Ingram's first submachine gun designs, with a distinct "Thompson" appearance.
- these submachine guns were built by the Police Ordnance Company in the United States for possible sales to domestic police forces, but police sales were very slow. After Ingram demonstrated his design abroad, foreign sales and production commenced in Cuba, Peru and Thailand.
- several distinct variations of this submachine gun were built; a "Police" model with a Thompson style forward pistol grip and cooling ribs on the barrel, a "Guard" model with a horizontal forearm and a long, round, heavy barrel (no fins), and a "Military" model, with a horizontal forearm, round barrel (no fins), sight protecting "ears" and provision for mounting a spike bayonet into the front of the forearm.
- these submachine guns were made in both full automatic ONLY and selective fire variants, with the user selecting the desired mode by varying the length of the trigger pull.

Manufacturer

- Marked on firearm as "Police Ordnance Company".

Serial Number

- examined example was numbered on the receiver/frame tube, with an un-numbered accessory barrel. Some of these submachine guns may have been numbered on the lower receiver/frame, rather than the tubular upper receiver/frame.

Calibre

- The calibre is marked on the receiver/frame tube.

Shots

- Detachable box magazine.

Notes

Make

- "Interarms" is usually marked on the side of the receiver/frame.

Model

- "MARK X" is marked on the left side of the receiver/frame.
- "Whitworth Rifle Company" may be marked on the top of the barrel and/or "Whitworth" may be marked on the receiver ring.
- "Whitworth" may also appear on the recoil pad/butt plate.
- "Whitworth" was a trade name used on firerams imported by "Interarms".
- introduced in 1974.
- features include: three-leaf open sight on the magnum calibres and standard open sights on the other calibres; adjustable trigger; hinged floorplate.

Manufacturer

- the Whitworth Rifle Company of Manchester, England, is referred to as a firearms producer, however, the company name also appears to be a brand/trade name used by the international firearms producer/distributor, "Interarms", of Manchester, England and Alexandria, Virginia (also referred to as: Interarms House).
- Interarms ordered firearms/components from "Zavodi Crvena Zastava" of Kragujevac, Yugoslavia, and had them produced/assembled into complete firearms by the Whitworth Rifle Company of Manchester, England. These firearms were then sold under both the "Whitworth" and "Interarms" brand names.
- based on samples examined it would appear that the Whitworth Rifle Company also modified/rebuilt existing Enfield Pattern 1914 and model 1917 rifles into sporting configuration.
- "Whitworth Rifle Company Manchester England" or a variation thereof is usually marked on the top of the barrel. The Interarms name will usually be found on the receiver/frame.
- on the sample examined the left side of the receiver/frame was marked "Zavodi, Yugoslavia" below the stock line (the stock must be removed to view these markings).

Action

- turn-bolt design.

Serial Number

- serial number is stamped on the right side of the receiver/frame.
- serial number observed had a letter prefix and six numbers.

Calibre

- the calibre designation is marked on the side of the barrel.

Shots

- integral box magazine with a hinged floor plate.

Notes

Make

- the make may not be marked on the firearm, and where present, may only be marked in Hindi.

Model

- the model may not be marked on the firearm, and, where present, may only be marked in Hindi.
- "Vidhwansak" means "Destroyer" in Sanskrit.
- this is an Indian-produced copy of the South African Denel NTW long-range sniper/anti-materiel rifle, based on samples that were supplied by Denel. This rifle is designed to be convertible between 12.7x107mm, 14.5x114mm, and 20x82mm, merely by changing bolts and barrels; the entire rifle is designed to be broken down for easy transport in packs by a two-person team.
- features include: long free-floating barrel with multi-chamber muzzle brake, bipod at the balance point, a square frame carry handle that also acts to protect the optical sights, box magazine on the left side of the frame/receiver, a buttpad directly attached to the rear of the receiver, and a hydraulic buffering mechanism that extends forward under the barrel. This rifle has no open sights, but is fitted with a rail for mounting optical sights.
- this rifle has been adopted for use by India's Border Security Forces, primarily in the disputed northern border regions with China and Pakistan.

Manufacturer

- the manufacturer may not be marked on the firearm, and where present, may only be marked in Hindi.

Action

- manual bolt action with hydraulic recoil buffering.

Firearms Reference Table, National Specialized Services, Royal Canadian Mounted Police. All rights reserved, RCMP, 1998-2026.

Serial Number - numbered on the frame/receiver.

Shots - detachable box magazine on the left side of the receiver.
